TOOLKIT INTERNAL SUMMATIVE EVALUATION RESULTS

- 70.6% of the replies supported the opinion that the International and National Cascade Trainings organized in the framework of WP2-3-4 allowed them to share the acquired knowledge with the staff of their institution supporting the improvement of its internationalization activities, with 47% of the replies being in strong agreement with this statement. The remaining share of the replies, 29.4%, neither agreed or disagreed with this statement.

- At the question asking which were the main issues encountered in the organisation of these training, mostly declared no issues. A couple of replies pointed out that there were some constraints for training transfer to the organisation, such as high workload with teaching and learning duties; and that the number of participants were not large enough and the time of the event was quite short. Another person highlighted that, as a trainer of internal and national cascade trainings, it was very effective for the faculty members for implementation.

- Problems encountered in this WP were mostly connected with the Covid pandemic making it impossible to meet in person, and the political crisis and war situation in Myanmar and Sri Lanka. Other highlighted problems were related to difficulties with budget transactions and information technology and the short time for managing.

- On the other hand, many positive aspects were pointed out, as the opportunity to get more experience and the improvement made with online activities in the course of the project. The motivation of partners to do their best to complete the project activities and get the most from it even during pandemic and political and economic crisis was highly appreciated. One participant emphasized that every IRO of university partner has now a new website and new brochure, mobility handbook and strategy for future development. Another reply stressed the value of the project activities to enhance internationalization and provide ideas and knowledge not only for partners but for the country's HEI's in general. Two major innovating aspects in particular for Myanmar were identified: the National Cascade training where the majority of participants were pro-rectors, professors who can develop and implement a policy framework on internationalization and could
